PC Maritime achieves ISO 9001:2000 certification

PC Maritime, the Plymouth-based navigation software designer and electronic chart distributor, has achieved a world-class business management standard with certification to ISO 9001:2000.

David Edmonds, managing director, said: "I'm delighted we've achieved ISO certification which is the result of everybody in the company working together very effectively. ISO certification is increasingly important in international markets and our customers will benefit from our achieving this quality standard."

The new ISO 9001 standard focusses particularly on customer satisfaction. As part of a review of company systems in the run-up to certification, PC Maritime introduced a new customer feedback tracking system to ensure that its products meet customers' requirements as closely as possible.
